

Visioning

A place for connection & community

VISION SHEET 4

OFFER MEMORABLE, ADVENTUROUS AND EXCITING EXPERIENCES

Encounters both active and passive

Redlands Coast community members are proud of their connection to nature and the diversity of outdoor recreation available. Birkdale Community Precinct could become a new focal point for the city – one that combines a range of both active and passive recreation.

Building on that reputation for outdoor recreation, the precinct could offer a dynamic and diverse range of land and water-based adventurous experiences that allow visitors to escape the ordinary. It could also become their “wellness place” where mind and body could be nurtured as visitors reconnect with friends and family and as a community.

The vision explores the potential for the precinct to make the most of the open space and accommodate outdoor venues for concerts and live sports events, adventure play facilities like high ropes courses, kayaking in the creek or more subtly integrated nature-based play elements woven throughout the precinct.

Featuring an Olympic-standard Canoe Slalom course, a whitewater facility could accommodate a range of integrated functions for year-round use including water play, an urban beach, a dive-in cinema and a lazy river. It could also be used by emergency services for training in swift-water rescue.

A community aquatic centre could include world-class 50m and ancillary pools complementing the aquatic elements of a whitewater facility. It could act as a local community destination in its own right, activating the parkland and providing critical community recreation, training and competition infrastructure.

A regionally distinct adventure play hub destination that defines the precinct could have potential attractions such as a high ropes course, zip lining and nature-based play – integrated as a major destination and a continuous recurring theme throughout the precinct.

Different types of lawns and public space could be incorporated across the precinct for temporary events, performances and concerts as well as day-to-day recreation, socialising and relaxation. These areas could be supported by public barbeques, shelters and amenities.

The intent is to offer memorable, adventurous and exciting experiences.
